NATIONAL CONSUMER MORTGAGE, LLC,

Debtor.

ORDER

JOHN P. BRINCKO,

Plaintiff,

v.

RIO PROPERTIES, INC.,

Defendant.

Presently before the Court is Defendant Rio Properties, Inc.’s (“Rio”) Motion for Summary Judgment on the Actual and Constructive Intent Fraudulent Transfer Claims (Doc. ##183-187), filed on August 15, 2011. Also before the Court is Rio’s Motion for Summary Judgment on the Good Faith Defense (Doc. ##189-193), filed on August 15, 2011. Plaintiff John P. Brincko (“Trustee”) filed an Omnibus Opposition, a Countermotion for Summary Judgment on the Fraudulent Transfer Claims and Rio’s Good Faith Defense, and a Motion for Sanctions (Doc. ##217-224) on September 19, 2011. Rio filed a Reply in support of its Motions for Summary Judgment and an Opposition to the Trustee’s Countermotion (Doc. #226) on October 19, 2011. Rio also filed an Opposition to the Trustee’s Motion for Sanctions (Doc. #229) on October 19, 2011. The Trustee filed a Reply in support of its Countermotion for Summary Judgment and its Motion for Sanctions

1 (Doc. #231) on November 3, 2011.

2 Also before the Court are Rio's Motions in Limine to Exclude the Expert 3 Testimony of Robert Leahy, Alex Seddio, and Peter Djinis (Doc. ##204-206), filed on 4 September 1, 2011. The Trustee filed an Omnibus Opposition to Rio's Motions in Limine 5 (Doc. #228) on October 19, 2011.

6 I. BACKGROUND

7 The parties are familiar with the facts of this case and the Court will not repeat
8 them here except where necessary. The parties have submitted nearly 400 pages in briefs
9 and over 6,800 pages of exhibits. As Magistrate Judge Leen stated in a prior Order (Doc.
10 #156) in this case, the Court does not have the time and resources to systematically cite to 11 the entire record to resolve the pending motions.

12 Debtor National Consumer Mortgage, LLC ("NCM") is a California limited 13 liability company that operated a mortgage broker business beginning in 2001. NCM was 14 owned by Sandra Favata and Dorothy Morisette ("Morisette"). Salvatore Favata, also 15 known as Sam Favata ("Favata"), is the husband of Sandra Favata, and the son of 16 Morisette. Although Favata was not an owner or named officer of NCM, Sandra Favata 17 and Morisette turned financial control of NCM over to Favata.

18 In 2004, NCM created a division called the Private Money Group, through which 19 Favata solicited investments from individuals for funding residential mortgages which were 20 supposed to be secured by deeds of trust, but generally were not. Funds from the investors 21 were deposited into NCM's bank account and commingled with NCM's other funds 22 obtained through the mortgage broker business.

23 On April 3, 2006, NCM filed for bankruptcy, and the Trustee subsequently was 24 appointed for the debtor's estate. The Trustee initiated this adversary proceeding against 25 Rio in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Central District of California on April 2, 26 2008. (Compl. (Doc. #36).) In the adversary proceeding, the Trustee alleges that Favata

1 operated the Private Money Group as a Ponzi scheme. The Trustee further contends Favata
2 wrote NCM business checks to himself for over $10 million, used those funds to purchase 3 66 cashier's checks from several banks made payable to himself, put those checks on 4 deposit at the Rio, and then gambled the proceeds at the Rio's sports book. Through this 5 adversary proceeding, the Trustee seeks to recover the $10 million from the Rio under the 6 bankruptcy code and California's Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act ("CUFTA"). Rio 7 denies it must return the funds to the bankruptcy estate, contending, among other things, 8 that it verified the cashier's checks were legitimate, and it therefore is a good faith 9 transferee.

10 On March 29, 2010, the United States District Court for the Central District of 11 California granted Rio's motion to withdraw the reference of the adversary proceeding from 12 the bankruptcy court. (Order (Doc. #28).) The Trustee thereafter filed an Amended 13 Complaint alleging claims for actual intent fraudulent transfer under 11 U.S.C.
14 §§ 548(a)(1)(A) and 550 (count one), constructive fraudulent transfer under 11 U.S.C.
15 §§ 548(a)(1)(B) and 550 (count two), avoidance of actual intent fraudulent transfers under 16 11 U.S.C. §§ 544 and 550 and California Civil Code § 3439.04(a)(1) (count three), and 17 avoidance of constructive fraudulent transfers under 11 U.S.C. §§ 544 and 550 and 18 California Civil Code § 3439.04(a)(2) (count four). (Second Am. Compl. (Doc. #40).) Rio 19 filed an Answer in which it raised the affirmative defense of good faith. (Am. Answer 20 (Doc. #71) at 5-6.) On June 10, 2010, the United States District Court for the Central 21 District of California granted Rio's motion to transfer venue to this Court. (Order (Doc.
22 #109).)

23 Rio filed two motions for summary judgment. In its first Motion, Rio argues the 24 Trustee cannot establish a prima facie case of actual or constructive fraudulent transfers. In 25 its second Motion, Rio argues it is entitled to summary judgment on its good faith defense.
26 The Trustee opposes Rio's Motions and countermoves for summary judgment on the same

1 issues. Rio also filed related motions in limine to exclude the Trustee's experts' reports and 2 testimony, which the Trustee opposes.

3 II. MOTIONS TO EXCLUDE

4 Federal Rule of Evidence 702 permits testimony based on "scientific, technical, 5 or other specialized knowledge" by experts qualified by "knowledge, skill, experience, 6 training, or education" if the testimony is both relevant and reliable. The trial court acts as a 7 "gatekeeper" to exclude expert testimony that is not both relevant and reliable. Kumho Tire 8 Co. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137, 147 (1999).

9 Testimony is relevant if it will "help the trier of fact to understand the evidence 10 or to determine a fact in issue." Fed. R. Evid. 702; see also Daubert v. Merrell Dow 11 Pharms., Inc., 43 F.3d 1311, 1315 (9th Cir. 1995) (stating testimony is relevant if it 12 "logically advances a material aspect of the proposing party's case"). To be helpful to the 13 jury, the testimony must be "'tied to the facts'" of the particular case. Daubert v. Merrell 14 Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 591 (1993) (quoting United States v. Downing, 753 F.2d 15 1224, 1242 (3d Cir. 1985)).

16 Expert testimony is reliable if it is "based on sufficient facts or data," "the 17 product of reliable principles and methods," and the expert "has reliably applied the 18 principles and methods to the facts of the case." Fed. R. Evid. 702. Reliability is not 19 determined based on the "correctness of the expert's conclusions but the soundness of his 20 methodology." Stilwell v. Smith & Nephew, Inc., 482 F.3d 1187, 1192 (9th Cir. 2007) 21 (quotation omitted). The trial court should ensure the expert "employs in the courtroom the 22 same level of intellectual rigor that characterizes the practice of an expert in the relevant 23 field." Kumho Tire, 526 U.S. at 152.

24 Whether to admit expert testimony, as well as deciding how to determine the 25 testimony is reliable, lies within the trial court's discretion. Kumho Tire, 526 U.S. at 152; 26 United States v. Calderon-Segura, 512 F.3d 1104, 1109 (9th Cir. 2008). The party offering

1 the expert testimony bears the burden of establishing its admissibility. Lust By & Through 2 Lust v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 89 F.3d 594, 598 (9th Cir. 1996).

3 A. Rio's Motion to Exclude Alex Seddio's Testimony

4 Rio moves to exclude the report and testimony of the Trustee's expert, Alex 5 Seddio ("Seddio"). Rio argues Seddio is not qualified to opine on the good faith inquiry of 6 what a reasonable Las Vegas casino would have done during the relevant time because he 7 has no familiarity with the standards and practices of Las Vegas casinos. Rio also argues 8 Seddio's testimony is irrelevant because the federal anti-money laundering regulations are 9 irrelevant, as the Trustee does not and cannot bring a federal money laundering claim 10 against Rio. Rio also argues Seddio's testimony consists of inadmissible conclusions 11 because Seddio does not identify at what point in time Rio was on inquiry notice; rather, 12 Seddio does a totality of the circumstances analysis based on hindsight. Rio also contends 13 Seddio's testimony consists of inadmissible legal opinions about what the federal anti-14 money laundering regulations require. Rio further contends Seddio improperly relied on 15 another expert for the Trustee, Robert Leahy ("Leahy"), to opine Favata engaged in 16 structuring, even though Leahy admitted he was not an expert in structuring.

17 Finally, Rio argues the probative value of Seddio's testimony is substantially 18 outweighed by the risk of prejudice, confusion, and misleading the jury. Specifically, Rio 19 argues Seddio's testimony will confuse the jury into thinking Rio is on trial for violating the 20 anti-money laundering regulations. Additionally, Rio contends allowing testimony on the 21 alleged connection between money laundering and the September 11 attacks is prejudicial.

22 The Trustee responds that Rio improperly attempts to change the good faith
23 standard from what a reasonable casino would have done to what other Las Vegas casinos 24 were doing at the relevant time. The Trustee argues Seddio properly opines that the federal 25 regulations applied to all casinos nationwide, and imposed obligations upon all casinos
26 which, had Rio complied, would have raised red flags to the Rio regarding Favata's

1 activities. The Trustee contends Seddio therefore does not need specific experience or 2 knowledge regarding the actual practices of Las Vegas casinos. The Trustee argues Rio has 3 offered experts on whether Rio acted in good faith, and the experts at least in part rely on 4 Rio's compliance with Nevada regulations. The Trustee contends he therefore may offer
5 Seddio as a rebuttal witness to opine that Rio failed to comply with other applicable 6 regulations, and therefore Rio did not act in good faith.

7 As to Seddio's report being conclusory, the Trustee contends Seddio explained 8 what he meant by totality of the circumstances, and identified that Rio was suspicious of 9 Favata from the time it filed a Suspicious Activity Report against him prior to any of the 10 transactions at issue in this case. As to Seddio offering legal opinions, the Trustee argues 11 that expert testimony which opines Rio failed to comply with industry standards properly 12 may include testimony related to whether Rio complied with applicable legal requirements.
13 As to Seddio's reliance on Leahy, the Trustee argues Leahy's charts and summaries are 14 admissible, and are based on Rio's own data. The Trustee notes that Leahy is not an expert 15 on structuring, but Seddio is, and he properly relied on Leahy's analysis of the data to reach 16 an opinion on structuring.

17 Finally, as to the probative value being outweighed by prejudice, the Trustee 18 argues that Rio put the issue of whether it complied with all applicable regulations at issue 19 in its good faith defense, and therefore the Trustee is entitled to respond. As for the 20 September 11 attacks, the Trustee argues revealing the history of federal regulations will 21 not evoke an emotional response in the jury.

22 Rio's argument regarding Seddio's lack of familiarity with the standards and 23 practices of Las Vegas casinos rests on Rio's erroneous statement of the applicable 24 standard. The standard is not, as Rio put it, what other Las Vegas casinos "would have 25 done (or did do) under similar circumstances," or "whether the Rio's actions were 26 consistent or inconsistent with other Las Vegas casinos." (Rio's Mot. in Lim. to Exclude

1 Alex Seddio (Doc. #205) at 13 & 16 n.4.) The good faith inquiry, as set forth more fully 2 below, is what a reasonable casino would do, not what Las Vegas casinos actually were 3 doing. Seddio opines a reasonable casino would comply with federal anti-money
4 laundering standards that applied to the Rio, other casinos, and other financial institutions 5 regardless of geographic location within the United States. To the extent the casinos' actual 6 practices bear on this analysis, Rio's criticism goes to the weight of Seddio's testimony, not 7 its admissibility. The Court therefore will not exclude Seddio's report based on a lack of 8 familiarity with the practices of Las Vegas casinos during the relevant time frame.

9 For similar reasons, the Court rejects Rio's argument that Seddio's testimony 10 regarding the federal anti-money laundering regulations is irrelevant. The Trustee does not 11 assert a federal money laundering claim against Rio. Rather, the Trustee offers Seddio's 12 testimony regarding the federal regulations to rebut Rio's good faith defense which is 13 based, at least in part, on Rio's own expert testimony that Rio acted in good faith as shown 14 by its compliance with applicable Nevada regulations. Rio's expert testified that Nevada 15 gaming law would require casinos to comply with federal regulations. (Trustee's Omnibus 16 Mem. P. & A. in Opp'n to Rio's Three Mots. in Limine (Doc. #228) ["Trustee's Limine 17 Opp'n"], Ex. A-1 at 213-14.) Other courts have looked to a casino's compliance with 18 applicable regulations as part of the good faith inquiry. See In re Armstrong, 285 F.3d 19 1092, 1094, 1096-98 (8th Cir. 2002) (finding casino did not act in good faith based in part 20 on casino's failure to comply with Louisiana gaming regulations). Seddio's opinion that a 21 reasonable casino would comply with applicable federal anti-money laundering regulations 22 therefore is relevant.

23 Moreover, such testimony is not inadmissible legal opinion testimony. See 24 Hangarter v. Provident Life & Acc. Ins. Co., 373 F.3d 998, 1016 (9th Cir. 2004) (holding 25 an expert's opinion that the defendants "deviated from industry standards" was admissible 26 so long as the expert did not "reach[] a legal conclusion that Defendants actually acted in

1 bad faith”). Rio’s own expert on good faith offered opinions on Rio’s compliance with 2 Nevada regulations. Rio’s other criticisms, including that Seddio’s opinions do not comport 3 with his prior experience regarding money laundering behavior, go to the weight of 4 Seddio’s testimony, not its admissibility. The Court therefore will not exclude Seddio’s 5 report for reaching improper legal conclusions.

6 Additionally, the Court will not exclude Seddio’s testimony based on Seddio not 7 identifying a precise point in time Rio was on inquiry notice. It is for the fact finder to 8 determine when along the continuum, if ever, Rio acted in bad faith, and Seddio’s testimony 9 may assist the fact finder in making this determination. Rio’s argument on this point goes 10 to the weight, not the admissibility, of Seddio’s testimony. United States v. Rahm, 993 F.2d 11 1405, 1412 (9th Cir. 1993) (“Absolute certainty of result is not required for admissibility” 12 of expert opinions. (quotation omitted)).

13 The Court also rejects Rio’s argument that Seddio improperly relied on Leahy’s 14 report for the underlying data because Leahy is not an expert in structuring. The Trustee 15 does not offer Leahy as an expert in structuring. Seddio is offered as an expert in 16 structuring, and Rio does not offer any argument, authority, or evidence that Seddio could 17 not rely on Leahy’s data analysis to reach his opinion on structuring. The Court therefore 18 will not exclude Seddio’s report for relying on Leahy’s report.

19 Finally, the probative value of Seddio’s testimony is not substantially outweighed 20 by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion, or misleading the jury. See Fed. R. Evid. 403.
21 The jury will be instructed on the appropriate legal standards governing the claims the 22 Trustee is asserting against Rio. Rio argues it acted in good faith as demonstrated by its 23 compliance with applicable regulations. The Trustee may attempt to rebut that defense with 24 evidence that Rio did not comply with all applicable regulations. The Court therefore will 25 deny Rio’s Motion on this basis.

26 ///

1 However, the Court agrees with Rio that any testimony referencing the alleged 2 connection between money laundering and the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks is of 3 little to no probative value, and is substantially outweighed by potential prejudice. The 4 reason the federal government enacted the regulations is irrelevant to whether Rio complied 5 with those regulations and any consequent impact Rio's noncompliance may have on the 6 issue of good faith in this fraudulent transfer action. Seddio can identify the regulations and 7 when they went into effect without tying the regulations to the September 11 attacks. The 8 Court therefore will grant Rio's Motion to Exclude Seddio's testimony to the extent Seddio
9 references the September 11 terror attacks.¹

10 B. Rio's Motion to Exclude Robert Leahy's Testimony

11 Rio moves to strike the testimony of the Trustee's other expert, Leahy,² on a 12 variety of grounds. The Trustee opposes.

13 1. Qualifications

14 Rio argues Leahy is not qualified as an expert because he is not a certified public 15 accountant, and thus he is not qualified to opine on whether Rio complied with Generally 16 Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"). Rio also argues Leahy is not qualified because 17 he is not a lawyer, he has never worked for FinCEN or the Treasury Department, and he 18 admitted he is not an expert on structuring. Rio thus contends Leahy is not qualified to 19 opine on whether Favata engaged in structuring. Next, Rio argues Leahy has never worked 20

21 ¹ Rio also moves to exclude the testimony of Peter Djinis ("Djinis"), another expert of the 22 Trustee. However, the Trustee does not rely upon Djinis's testimony in either his opposition to Rio's 23 Motions or in support of his own Countermotion for Summary Judgment. The Court therefore will deny Rio's Motion to Exclude Djinis's testimony as moot, without prejudice to renew at trial.

24 ² On January 8, 2013, the Trustee informed the Court that Leahy passed away. (Letter (Doc.
25 #245).) Given the lack of a comparable expert by Rio and the Court's ruling denying Rio's Motion 26 to Exclude, it is unclear whether a replacement expert will be necessary or whether Leahy's deposition testimony will suffice for trial. However, should a motion for a replacement expert be filed, the Court will refer the matter to the Magistrate Judge.

1 for a Las Vegas casino and has no knowledge of casino practices during the relevant time 2 frame, and thus Leahy is not qualified to opine on what a reasonable casino would have 3 done during the relevant time period. Finally, as to qualifications, Rio argues Leahy is not 4 an expert on the handling of cashier's checks, as he has no experience in the matter.

5 The Trustee responds that Leahy is not offering an opinion on whether Rio 6 complied with GAAP, whether Favata was engaged in structuring, or on cashier's check 7 handling procedures, and thus these arguments are irrelevant. The Trustee argues Leahy is 8 qualified to opine on what a reasonable casino would have done because of his extensive 9 experience in internal controls in the gaming industry. The Trustee contends the geographic 10 location of a casino is irrelevant to this inquiry.

11 Rio does not provide any evidence that Leahy is opining that Rio failed to comply
12 with GAAP, that Favata was engaged in structuring, or on any topic regarding Rio's 13 cashier's check handling procedures. The Trustee denies Leahy will offer opinions on these 14 subjects. The Court therefore will deny Rio's Motion to Exclude on these grounds as moot.

15 As to whether Leahy is qualified to construct financial analyses and draw 16 conclusions therefrom, Leahy has an accounting degree. He was employed for over nine 17 years with a gaming resort, and held positions such as Manager of Information Technology, 18 Director of Accounting and Operational Analysis, Vice President of Finance, and Vice 19 President of Process Improvement. Leahy currently is employed for a company which 20 owns, operates, and manages casino resort properties. Through his positions, Leahy has 21 acquired experience in preparing and reviewing financial reports, operating analyses, 22 financial data, operating data, and internal controls within the gaming industry setting.
23 Leahy has reviewed company internal controls and has received training on the subject 24 throughout his career.

25 Rio does not dispute Leahy's qualifications except to note that Leahy has not 26 worked for any Las Vegas casinos. Rio's insistence that Leahy must have Las Vegas casino

1 experience is based on Rio's erroneous statement of the good faith standard, as discussed
2 above with respect to Seddio. Leahy need not have worked for a Las Vegas casino to opine 3 on the internal controls or financial and operational data of casinos generally, and Rio does 4 not identify any difference between Las Vegas casinos and other casinos which would 5 render Leahy's testimony inadmissible. The Court therefore will deny Rio's Motion to 6 Exclude on this basis.

7 2. GAAP

8 Rio argues Leahy's opinions lack a reliable foundation because although Leahy 9 testified he prepared a financial analysis in conformity with GAAP, he could not identify 10 what GAAP standards would require Rio to prepare such an analysis. The Trustee responds 11 that Leahy identified the methodology he used, and that Rio does not dispute Leahy's 12 calculations are accurate.

13 Leahy does not opine that GAAP required Rio to perform the analyses he 14 performed. Rather, he testified that he performed his own analysis in conformity with 15 GAAP. Leahy described the processes he used to create his graphs, which are visual 16 summaries of information Leahy obtained from Rio. (Trustee's Limine Opp'n, Ex. A-13 at 17 72-74, 78-79.) Specifically, Leahy identified his methodology as "accounting for financial 18 analysis," and he described that analysis. (Id. at 78-80.) Rio does not dispute the accuracy 19 of any of Leahy's calculations or graphs. Because Leahy does not offer the opinion to 20 which Rio objects, Leahy describes his methodology, and Rio does not dispute the accuracy 21 of Leahy's calculations or graphs, the Court will deny Rio's Motion to Exclude on this 22 basis.

23 3. Opinions on Rio's Management

24 Rio argues Leahy's opinions about what Rio management should have done lack 25 a reliable foundation because Leahy has no experience in the operation and management of 26 Las Vegas casinos. The Trustee responds that Leahy does not need experience in Las

1 Vegas casino management because the internal control principles about which he is opining 2 would apply to any casino, regardless of geographic location.

3 As discussed above, Leahy need not have experience specifically related to Las 4 Vegas casinos. Rio's argument is based on its erroneous statement of the applicable 5 standard, and Rio does not identify any material difference between Las Vegas casinos and 6 other casinos that would render Leahy's testimony inadmissible. The Court will deny Rio's 7 Motion to Exclude on this basis.

8 4. Assisting the Trier of Fact

9 Rio argues Leahy's proposed testimony is not helpful to the jury in resolving the 10 issues in the case because the activity in a customer's front money account or the amount of 11 complimentary services he received from the casino have no bearing on whether Rio acted 12 in good faith in cashing Favata's cashier's checks. Additionally, Rio contends Leahy's 13 report is nothing more than "simple math" that is not helpful to the jury. The Trustee 14 responds that Leahy's testimony would assist the jury in providing a summary of Rio's 15 financial records, as well as the conclusions Leahy drew from that analysis.

16 As an initial matter, if Leahy's charts and graphs are the result of "simple math," 17 they would be admissible as summary or calculation evidence as a compilation of Rio's 18 source materials. See Fed. R. Evid. 1006. Moreover, Leahy testified that to create the 19 charts and tables he created, a person would need an understanding of accounting, gaming, 20 and how to operate the software application he used. (Trustee's Limine Opp'n, Ex. A-13 at 21 75.) Further, the extent to which certain data within Leahy's analyses and opinions impacts 22 the question of Rio's good faith goes to the weight, not admissibility, of Leahy's testimony.
23 The Court therefore will deny Rio's Motion to Exclude on this basis.

24 5. Probative Value

25 Rio argues the probative value of Leahy's testimony is substantially outweighed 26 by the danger of prejudice, confusion of the issues, and would be misleading to the jury

1 because a jury might be confused into thinking casinos prepare such charts and Rio failed to 2 comply with GAAP by not doing so, or that Favata was convicted of structuring when he 3 was not. The Trustee responds that Leahy is not offering an opinion that Las Vegas casinos 4 prepare such charts or that Favata was convicted of structuring.

5 As discussed previously, Leahy testified he was not opining Rio should have 6 compiled these exact reports. Rather, he testified that Rio had available the same data and,
7 had it analyzed that data, Rio would have discovered significant changes in Favata's
8 behavior or other details about Favata's dealings with Rio. (See, e.g., Trustee's Limine 9 Opp'n, Ex. A-13 at 81.) The Court therefore will deny Rio's Motion to Exclude on this 10 basis.

11 6. Rule 26

12 Finally, Rio argues Leahy's report does not comply with Rule 26 because his 13 report consists of charts with no meaningful explanation of those charts, such as an 14 explanation of the data or what methodology he used to create each chart. The Trustee 15 responds that Leahy's report complies with Rule 26, as he provides a thirteen page narrative 16 analysis to explain his charts.

17 Expert reports are required to eliminate "unfair surprise to the opposing party and 18 [to conserve] resources." Elgas v. Colo. Belle Corp., 179 F.R.D. 296, 299 (D. Nev. 1998)
19 (quotation omitted). Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(a)(2)(B) requires an expert's 20 written report to contain, among other items, a "complete statement of all opinions the 21 witness will express and the basis and reasons for them." However, an expert report need 22 not "replicate every word that the expert might say on the stand." See Walsh v. Chez, 583 23 F.3d 990, 994 (7th Cir. 2009). Rather, the expert's report must "convey the substance of the 24 expert's opinion, along with the other background information required by [the rule], so that 25 the opponent will be ready to rebut, to cross-examine, and to offer a competing expert if 26 necessary." Id.; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, 1993 advisory comm. n.

1 Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37(c)(1):

2 (1) Failure to Disclose or Supplement. If a party fails to provide 3 information or identify a witness as required by Rule 26(a) or (e), the 4 party is not allowed to use that information or witness to supply 5 evidence on a motion, at a hearing, or at a trial, unless the failure was 6 substantially justified or is harmless. In addition to or instead of this 7 sanction, the court, on motion and after giving an opportunity to be 8 heard:

- 9 (A) may order payment of the reasonable expenses,
10 including attorney's fees, caused by the failure; 11 (B) may inform the jury of the party's failure; and 12 (C) may impose other appropriate sanctions, including 13 any of the orders listed in Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi).

14 "The party facing sanctions bears the burden of proving that its failure to disclose 15 the required information was substantially justified or is harmless." R & R Sails, Inc. v. Ins.
16 Co. of Penn., 673 F.3d 1240, 1246 (9th Cir. 2012). Where the sanction effectively will 17 constitute dismissal of a claim, the Court must consider whether the sanctioned party's 18 actions involved "willfulness, fault, or bad faith." Id. at 1247. Additionally, the Court must 19 consider lesser sanctions. Id.

20 Here, Leahy's report is inadequate under Rule 26(a)(2)(B). Leahy's report does 21 not set forth the basis or reasons for his opinions. Although his report contains a summary 22 in addition to the charts, the summary merely identifies what is in the charts without 23 explaining how Leahy calculated any of the figures represented in the charts.

24 Nevertheless, the Court finds any such failure was relatively harmless. Rio has 25 been in possession of Leahy's report since March 2010. (Stip. (Doc. #96) at 2.) Rio has 26 presented no evidence that it advised the Trustee during discovery that Leahy's report was inadequate. Rio had an opportunity at Leahy's deposition to explore the bases for his opinions. Although Rule 26(a)(2)(B) is designed in part to obviate the need for depositions if the report adequately sets forth the expert's opinions and the bases therefor, Rio presents no evidence that it objected to the report or to deposing Leahy in the absence of a more complete report, or that Rio sought any other relief during the discovery period relating to

1 the adequacy of Leahy's report.³ Instead, Rio waited until the parties had committed 2 enormous resources to completing discovery and submitting the matter on summary 3 judgment to object to the adequacy of Leahy's initial report. Under these circumstances, an 4 order precluding consideration of Leahy's deposition testimony on summary judgment is 5 too severe a sanction.

6 Rule 37(c)(1) allows the Court to consider sanctions other than precluding use of 7 the inadequately disclosed evidence. The Court, in its discretion, concludes that in this 8 case, the sanction of requiring the Trustee to pay the reasonable costs and attorney's fees 9 associated with Leahy's first deposition is an appropriate sanction. Given this and other 10 issues addressed in this Order, the Court concludes a settlement conference in this matter 11 may be productive, and the Court will refer this action to the Magistrate Judge for a 12 settlement conference. Rio shall serve and file a memorandum, supported by an affidavit of 13 counsel, establishing the amount of fees and costs incurred in the first deposition of Leahy 14 within fourteen (14) days after the settlement conference to be set in this matter, if no
15 settlement is reached. The Court will grant Rio's Motion to Exclude Leahy's testimony 16 only to this limited extent. The Motion is denied in all other respects.

17 III. MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

18 Summary judgment is appropriate if the pleadings, the discovery and disclosure 19 materials on file, and any affidavits show that "there is no genuine dispute as to any 20 material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P.
21 56(a), (c). A fact is "material" if it might affect the outcome of a suit, as determined by the 22 governing substantive law. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). An

23
24 ³ Rio did move to compel further deposition testimony from Leahy after the Trustee's counsel
25 inappropriately advised Leahy not to answer certain questions at Leahy's deposition. The Magistrate 26 Judge ruled in Rio's favor, allowing for a continued deposition of Leahy. (Order (Doc. #233).) The Magistrate Judge also awarded Rio sanctions in the form of reasonable costs and attorney's fees for both the motion to compel and the continued deposition. (Id.)

1 issue is “genuine” if sufficient evidence exists such that a reasonable fact finder could find
2 for the non-moving party. Villiarimo v. Aloha Island Air, Inc., 281 F.3d 1054, 1061 (9th 3 Cir. 2002). Initially, the moving party bears the burden of proving there is no genuine issue 4 of material fact. Leisek v. Brightwood Corp., 278 F.3d 895, 898 (9th Cir. 2002). After the 5 moving party meets its burden, the burden shifts to the non-moving party to produce 6 evidence that a genuine issue of material fact remains for trial. Id. The Court views all 7 evidence in the light most favorable to the non-moving party. Id.

8 Sections 548 and 544 of the Bankruptcy Code allow a bankruptcy trustee to avoid 9 a fraudulent transfer under either federal law or state law. Under section 548, a trustee may 10 avoid a transfer if the transfer is made within one year⁴ of the filing of a bankruptcy petition 11 and the debtor either (1) had actual intent to defraud or (2) received less than reasonably 12 equivalent value in exchange for the transfer and was insolvent, was made insolvent by the 13 transfer, was operating or about to operate without property constituting reasonably 14 sufficient capital, or was unable to pay debts as they became due. 11 U.S.C.
15 § 548(a)(1)(A), (B).

16 Under section 544, a bankruptcy trustee may avoid a transfer that an unsecured
17 creditor with an allowable claim could have avoided under applicable state law. Id.
18 § 544(b)(1). Under CUFTA, a transfer is voidable if the debtor made the transfer (1) with 19 actual intent to defraud or (2) without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange 20 for the transfer and was insolvent, was “engaged or was about to engage in a business or 21 transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation 22 to the business or transaction” or “[i]ntended to incur, or believed or reasonably should 23 have believed that he or she would incur, debts beyond his or her ability to pay as they

24
25 ⁴ Section 548 now provides that transfers within two years of the petition are voidable, but at 26 the time NCM filed its petition, the statute provided that transfers within one year of the petition were voidable.

1 became due.” Cal. Civil Code § 3439.04(a)

2 Upon avoiding a fraudulent transfer under either section 544 or section 548, a 3 trustee may recover the transferred property or the value thereof from the initial transferee 4 or from any subsequent transferees. 11 U.S.C. § 550(a). However, a trustee may not 5 recover from “a transferee that takes for value, . . . in good faith, and without knowledge of 6 the voidability of the transfer avoided.” Id. § 550(b)(1); see also Cal. Civ. Code 7 § 3439.08(a) (providing a similar good faith defense under CUFTA).

8 A. The Trustee’s Prima Facie Case

9 Rio contends the Trustee cannot establish his prima facie case for actual intent 10 fraudulent transfer as a matter of law. First, Rio argues the Trustee cannot show the debtor, 11 NCM, acted with the requisite intent because Favata’s intent cannot be imputed to NCM, as 12 Favata was not an officer or director of NCM. Second, Rio argues that even if Favata’s 13 intent can be imputed to NCM, Favata testified he did not intent to hinder, delay, or defraud 14 NCM’s creditors. Third, Rio argues the Trustee is not entitled to the Ponzi presumption, 15 which assumes intent where the debtor operated a Ponzi scheme, because Favata’s plea 16 agreement is inadmissible hearsay, and Favata does not admit to a Ponzi scheme in any 17 event. Rio also contends the Trustee cannot rely on Favata’s deposition testimony to 18 establish a Ponzi scheme because Favata testified NCM was operating a legitimate and 19 profitable mortgage brokering business.

20 As to constructive fraudulent transfers, Rio argues the Trustee cannot show NCM 21 was insolvent at the time of each transfer. Rio contends the Trustee cannot rely on Favata’s 22 plea agreement to establish insolvency because the plea agreement is inadmissible and in 23 any event the plea agreement does not set forth any facts that NCM was insolvent.
24 Additionally, Rio contends the Trustee cannot rely on Favata’s deposition testimony 25 because he testified NCM operated a legitimate and profitable business. Rio further argues 26 the Trustee cannot rely on a reconstruction of records performed by the Trustee because the

1 reconstruction is inadmissible as speculative lay opinion testimony. Rio also argues the 2 reconstruction does not establish insolvency at the time of any particular transfer, even if it 3 were admissible.

4 The Trustee responds that he has established actual intent fraudulent transfers 5 through Favata's plea agreement, which the Trustee contends is admissible, as well as 6 through Favata's deposition testimony in which he admits he operated a Ponzi scheme 7 through NCM. The Trustee also contends that even absent the Ponzi presumption, the 8 transfers carry badges of fraud which would support a finding of actual intent. As to 9 whether Favata's intent can be imputed to NCM, the Trustee contends that Favata had 10 actual and apparent authority to act on NCM's behalf, as demonstrated by the testimony of 11 Sandra Favata and Morisette, who both testified they turned financial control of NCM over 12 to Favata.

13 As to constructive fraudulent transfers, the Trustee argues Favata's plea 14 agreement and testimony establish insolvency. Moreover, the Trustee contends the 15 reconstruction is admissible as a summary and conclusions drawn therefrom are admissible 16 as lay opinion that establishes NCM's insolvency.

17 A trustee can bring fraudulent transfer claims under both section 548 and section 18 544 based on either actual intent to defraud creditors or constructive fraud. To establish 19 fraudulent transfers made with the actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, the 20 Trustee must show (1) the debtor transferred an interest in property to the defendant; (2) the 21 transfer occurred within the applicable time period, and (3) the debtor made the transfer 22 with the actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud its creditor or creditors. 11 U.S.C.
23 §§ 548(a)(1)(A), 544; Cal. Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(a)(1), 3439.09. To establish constructive 24 fraudulent transfers, the Trustee must show (1) the transfer involved the debtor's property; 25 (2) the transfer was made within the applicable time period; (3) the debtor did not receive 26 reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the property transferred; and (4) the debtor was

1 insolvent, was made insolvent by the transaction, was operating or about to operate without 2 property constituting reasonable sufficient capital, or was unable to pay debts as they 3 became due at the time of the transfer. 11 U.S.C. §§ 548(a)(1)(B), 544; Cal. Civ. Code 4 §§ 3439.04(a)(2), 3439.09.

5 1. The Ponzi Presumption

6 A Ponzi scheme is “a financial fraud that induces investment by promising 7 extremely high, risk-free returns, usually in a short time period, from an allegedly legitimate 8 business venture.” Donell v. Kowell, 533 F.3d 762, 767 n.2 (9th Cir. 2008) (quotation 9 omitted). “The fraud consists of funnelling proceeds received from new investors to 10 previous investors in the guise of profits from the alleged business venture, thereby 11 cultivating an illusion that a legitimate profit-making business opportunity exists and 12 inducing further investment.” Id. (quotation omitted); see also In re Slatkin, 525 F.3d 805, 13 809 n.1 (9th Cir. 2008). The “mere existence of a Ponzi scheme is sufficient to establish 14 actual intent under § 548(a)(1) or a state’s equivalent to that section.” In re AFI Holding, 15 Inc., 525 F.3d 700, 704 (9th Cir. 2008) (quotation omitted). Courts presume actual intent in 16 relation to a Ponzi scheme because the debtor knows at the time of the transfer that the 17 scheme ultimately must collapse. In re Indep. Clearing House Co., 77 B.R. 843, 860 (D.
 18 Utah 1987). Proof that transfers were made pursuant to a Ponzi scheme likewise establishes 19 insolvency for constructive fraudulent transfers. Donell, 533 F.3d at 770-71; Warfield v.
 20 Byron, 436 F.3d 551, 558-59 (5th Cir. 2006) (stating a Ponzi scheme “is, as a matter of law, 21 insolvent from its inception”).

22 A plea agreement in which the defendant admits he ran a Ponzi scheme is 23 admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 807, the residual hearsay exception. In re 24 Slatkin, 525 F.3d at 811-12. Moreover, a “debtor’s admission, through guilty pleas and a 25 plea agreement admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence, that he operated a Ponzi 26 scheme with the actual intent to defraud his creditors conclusively establishes the debtor’s

1 fraudulent intent under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A) and California Civil Code § 3439.04(a)(1), 2 and precludes relitigation of that issue.” Id. at 814.

3 Here, Favata’s plea agreement is admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 807.
4 Moreover, even if the plea agreement was inadmissible, Favata reaffirmed the statements in 5 his plea agreement during his deposition in this case. Rio’s argument that Favata did not 6 admit to a Ponzi scheme is meritless. Favata unambiguously admitted to operating a Ponzi 7 scheme in his plea agreement, and he reaffirmed those admissions at his deposition.
8 Specifically, Favata admitted that from 2000 to 2006, he “used the investment division of 9 NCM to operate a fraudulent scheme that bilked hundreds of investors of sums totaling in 10 excess of $20 million.” (Trustee’s Countermot. for Summ. J. (Doc. #217) [“Trustee’s 11 Countermot.”], Ex. B-25 at 4.) Favata admitted he (1) “falsely represented that NCM 12 directly loaned money at high rates of return to borrowers who required short term credit,” 13 (2) “falsely told investors they could purchase the notes that secured these loans and thus 14 acquire the right to collect the interest payments,” and (3) “falsely assured investors that 15 their principal . . . would be returned once the borrower paid off the loan from NCM.” (Id.
16 at 4-5.) Additionally, Favata admitted that at the time he made these representations to 17 investors, he “knew that the purported private money note investments that he offered to 18 investors simply did not exist,” and that he “had neither the means nor the intention of 19 investing his client[’]s money as promised.” (Id. at 5.) Favata further admitted that he 20 falsely promised substantial rates of return and that real property secured the investments.
21 (Id.)

22 Additionally, Favata admitted he diverted investors’ funds to his personal use and 23 also “used investor funds to prevent detection of his scheme. In particular, he often 24 diverted funds from new investors to feign purported interest payments to the original 25 investors in the scheme. As a result of these lulling payments, Favata induced many victims 26 to reinvest their principal into the scheme rather [than] withdrawing their funds.” (Id. at 5-

1 6.) Favata's admissions are conclusive and preclude relitigation of the issue of whether 2 Favata acted with the requisite intent to defraud.

3 Favata's admissions also conclusively establish insolvency from the inception of 4 the Ponzi scheme, as a Ponzi scheme is insolvent from its inception as a matter of law. The 5 mere fact that NCM conducted some legitimate business does not raise an issue of fact as to 6 whether Favata was operating a massive Ponzi scheme. Rio relies on Favata's testimony 7 that NCM was generating $300,000 per month through its legitimate business to argue 8 NCM was solvent despite the Ponzi scheme. Favata testified at his deposition that "[a]t one 9 point" the legitimate side of the business was profitable. (Trustee's Countermot., Ex. B-54 10 at 183.) Specifically, Favata testified that from late 2004 until it closed, the legitimate side 11 was doing well, and in the last six months of NCM's business, NCM was generating 12 $250,000 to $300,000 per month in profit from the legitimate side of the business. (Id. at 13 184-85.) However, Favata also testified that from 2002 to February 2005, he had duped 14 investors out of approximately $5 or $6 million dollars through his Ponzi scheme, and as of 15 February 2005, NCM had a $4 million deficit due to the Ponzi scheme. (Id. at 187-89.)
16 During the same period when the legitimate side was doing well, the Ponzi scheme grew 17 even more dramatically, as Favata raised about $15 million from February 2005 to the end 18 of 2005. (Id. at 187-89.) Profits from the legitimate side may have assisted Favata in 19 extending his scheme, as Favata commingled funds from both sides of the business. But no 20 genuine issue of fact remains that the legitimate business was dwarfed by Favata's massive 21 Ponzi scheme, and NCM was insolvent from its inception and throughout its existence.⁵

24 ⁵ Rio's reliance on Favata's testimony that someone offered him $10 million for NCM also 25 does not raise an issue of fact as to solvency. Favata did not disclose the fraudulent nature of his 26 business to the potential purchaser, and thus any purported sales price would be illusory. Nor is it plausible that Favata would have sold his Ponzi scheme to a legitimate business which would uncover his wrongdoing.

1 Because no genuine issue of fact remains that NCM was insolvent at the time of 2 each of the alleged transfers, the Trustee is entitled to summary judgment that he has 3 established insolvency for his prima facie case of constructive fraudulent transfers under 11
4 U.S.C. § 548(a)(2), § 544, and CUFTA § 3439.04(a)(2). However, as to actual intent 5 fraudulent transfers, Rio disputes whether Favata's intent can be imputed to NCM.

6 2. Imputation

7 To be a fraudulent transfer under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1), § 544, and CUFTA 8 § 3439.04(a)(1), the debtor must act with the actual intent to delay, hinder, and defraud its 9 creditors. Rio contends that even if Favata acted with such intent, NCM did not, as Favata
10 was not an owner, officer, or director of NCM. The Trustee responds that Sandra Favata 11 and Morisette turned NCM's financial affairs completely over to Favata, and he thus had 12 actual and/or apparent authority to act on NCM's behalf.

13 A corporation can form intent only through its agents. Sea Horse Ranch, Inc. v.
14 Superior Court, 24 Cal. App. 4th 446, 456-57 (Cal. Ct. App. 1994). An agent may have 15 actual or ostensible authority to act on behalf of the corporation. Cal. Civ. Code § 2298.
16 "An agency is actual when the agent is really employed by the principal." Id. § 2299. "An 17 agency is ostensible when the principal intentionally, or by want of ordinary care, causes a 18 third person to believe another to be his agent who is not really employed by him." Id.
19 § 2300.

20 Where an agent acts within the scope of his authority, his acts and knowledge 21 generally are imputed to the principal. See Peregrine Funding, Inc. v. Sheppard Mullin
22 Richter & Hampton LLP, 133 Cal. App. 4th 658, 679 (Cal. Ct. App. 2005); In re Tran, 301
23 B.R. 576, 581 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 2003). A corporate agent's knowledge is not imputed to a 24 corporation if he is acting adverse to the corporation's interest. Meyer v. Glenmoor Homes, 25 Inc., 246 Cal. App. 2d 242, 264 (Cal. Ct. App. 1966). However, a corporate agent's fraud 26 may be imputed to the corporation where the wrongdoer or wrongdoers were the sole

1 relevant actors for the corporation. See Peregrine Funding, Inc., 133 Cal. App. 4th at 2 679-80; Casey v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 127 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1143-44 (Cal. Ct. App.
3 2005). This "sole actor" rule is based on the principle that where the principal grants 4 authority to an unsupervised agent, "the principal must accept the consequences of the 5 agent's misconduct because it was the principal who allowed the agent to act without 6 accountability." First Nat'l Bank of Cicero v. Lewco Sec. Corp., 860 F.2d 1407, 1417-18 7 (7th Cir. 1988).

8 Here, no genuine issue of material fact remains that Favata acted with actual 9 authority in controlling all of NCM's financial affairs. The fact that Favata was not a 10 named officer or director of NCM is not dispositive. Rather, the undisputed testimony from 11 Sandra Favata and Favata is that Morisette and Sandra Favata gave Favata complete and 12 unfettered control over NCM's finances. Favata personally was involved in raising investor 13 funds for NCM and he decided the interest rate to be advertised to investors in the Ponzi 14 scheme. Favata testified he had authority to make business decisions for NCM and that he 15 did not have to ask Sandra Favata for permission because he "controlled it myself." 16 (Trustee's Countermot., Ex. B-54 at 224-25.) Morisette signed hundreds of blank checks at 17 a time and turned them over to Favata to run NCM's finances. (Id. at 70-73.) Sandra 18 Favata and Favata both testified Favata made decisions regarding the benefits and 19 compensation Sandra Favata received from NCM. (Id. at 76; Trustee's Countermot., Ex. B-20 47 at 176.) Sandra Favata also testified that Favata determined his own compensation from 21 NCM. (Trustee's Countermot., Ex. B-47 at 176-77.) Favata likewise testified that he was 22 "in control of the checkbook, the moneys in/moneys out." (Trustee's Countermot., Ex. B-23 54 at 69.) Additionally, Sandra Favata signed a casino credit application with the Rio 24 which identified Sam Favata as being employed by and an owner of NCM. (Trustee's 25 Countermot., Ex. B-9.) Rio presents no contrary evidence to suggest Favata was not 26 actually authorized to act on NCM's behalf.

1 Because Favata had unfettered control over NCM's finances, including decisions 2 regarding compensation to himself, Sandra Favata, and Morisette, he was acting in the 3 course of his employment and within the scope of his authority when he transferred funds 4 from NCM to himself. The movement of corporate assets and decisions about 5 compensation for owners and employees are ordinary functions of management which 6 typically would be attributed to the company. The mere fact that Favata performed illegal
7 acts does not mean he acted outside the scope of his authority. See USACM Liquidating 8 Trust v. Deloitte & Touche, LLP, 764 F. Supp. 2d 1210, 1222-23 (D. Nev. 2011).

9 However, no genuine issue of fact remains that Favata acted adversely to NCM.
10 NCM obtained no benefit from Favata's looting of the company through his Ponzi scheme.
11 Thus, the question which remains is whether Favata was the sole relevant actor at NCM 12 such that his intent should be imputed to the company even though he was acting adverse to 13 NCM's interests.

14 Viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the Trustee on Rio's Motion for 15 Summary Judgment, a reasonable jury could find Favata was the sole relevant actor at 16 NCM. Sandra Favata and Morisette, while nominally the owners and controlling members 17 of NCM, granted Favata unfettered and unsupervised control over NCM's finances.
18 Morisette went so far as to sign hundreds of blank checks for Favata's use to operate NCM.
19 Neither party points to any evidence that Morisette, had she been aware of the fraud, could 20 or would have stopped it. As to Sandra Favata, she testified Favata informed her that he did 21 not have the deeds of trust to secure the investments in NCM's Private Money Group 22 approximately four to five weeks after she first learned of an SEC investigation in early to 23 mid January 2006. (Trustee's Countermot., Ex. B-47 at 267-71.) Sandra Favata testified 24 she contacted an attorney the next day. (Id. at 269.) However, Sandra Favata never turned 25 Favata in to the authorities, and Favata continued to cash cashier's checks at the Rio with 26 funds derived from NCM as late as March 22, 2006. A reasonable jury therefore could find

1 that Sandra Favata either could not or would not take steps to end Favata's fraudulent
2 behavior even after she became aware of it, and thus find Favata was the sole relevant actor
3 at NCM whose intent should be imputed to NCM. The Court therefore will deny Rio's 4 Motion on this basis.

5 Rio contends the Trustee has made inconsistent allegations in this action and a 6 related action against Bank of America, and the Trustee must be bound by his prior 7 allegations regarding the separation between Favata and the debtor NCM. In the Bank of 8 America action, the Trustee alleged Favata was NCM's agent who acted contrary to the 9 debtor's interest and without the debtor's permission. (Rio's Mot. Summ. J. (Doc. #189) 10 ["Rio's MSJ"], Ex. B-4.) However, the Trustee did not allege in the Bank of America 11 action that Favata's intent is not imputable to NCM. The Trustee's allegations are 12 consistent with his allegations in this action, and with imputation law and its various 13 exceptions. Moreover, the Trustee can plead in the alternative. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(2).

14 The Court does not find the Trustee must be judicially estopped from asserting 15 Favata's intent is imputable to NCM, as Rio presents no evidence a court accepted a prior 16 clearly inconsistent position or that allowing the Trustee to proceed would give the Trustee 17 an unfair advantage over Rio. United States v. Ibrahim, 522 F.3d 1003, 1009 (9th Cir.
18 2008). Rio argues the Trustee should be judicially estopped because the Trustee survived a 19 motion to dismiss and then settled with Bank of America in the other action. However, 20 Bank of America moved to dismiss based only on the argument that Bank of America did 21 not have actual knowledge Favata was looting, and therefore it could not have aided and 22 abetted Favata. (Rio's MSJ, Ex. B-5.) The Trustee responded by arguing the bank had 23 actual knowledge of facts which put the bank on notice of Favata's activities. (Id.) Rio 24 presents no evidence, for example, that in response to an in pari delicto defense raised by 25 Bank of America, the Trustee alleged that Favata's actions could not be imputed to NCM.
26 Rio presents no prior court order adopting any such position by the Trustee. Further, a

1 settlement does not amount to a court adopting the Trustee's purportedly inconsistent 2 position. To the extent the Trustee's allegations in the Bank of America action are judicial 3 admissions which suggest Favata's intent should not be imputed to NCM, Rio may use 4 them to bolster its position at trial. However, the Court will deny Rio's Motion for 5 Summary Judgment on the issue.

6 Viewing the facts in the light most favorable to Rio on the Trustee's
7 Countermotion for Summary Judgment, a reasonable jury could find Favata was not the sole 8 relevant actor at NCM. Although Favata exercised de facto control, both Morisette and 9 Sandra Favata had actual authority within the company to stop Favata's fraudulent conduct.
10 Sandra Favata averred in an affidavit that upon learning that the "private money business 11 operated by Sam Favata had problems," she employed an accounting firm to perform an 12 audit, and ultimately filed the petition for NCM's bankruptcy, thus effectively putting an 13 end to Favata's ability to use NCM for fraudulent purposes. (Trustee's Countermot., Ex. B-14 23 at 3 ¶ 13.) A reasonable jury thus could find Favata was not the sole relevant actor at 15 NCM, and his intent should not be imputed to NCM. The Court therefore will deny the 16 Trustee's Countermotion on this basis.

17 B. Rio's Good Faith Defense

18 1. Trustee's Motion for Sanctions

19 The Trustee moves for sanctions under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37(c) 20 based on Rio's denial throughout discovery that it was not required to comply with the 21 federal anti-money laundering regulation set forth in 31 C.F.R. § 103.64. The Trustee 22 contends that after discovery closed, Rio took the contrary position via the rebuttal expert 23 report of Courtney J. Linn ("Linn"). The Trustee requests that Rio be bound to its original 24 position in discovery, and that it not be permitted to put forth Linn's testimony that Rio
25 substantially complied with section 103.64. Alternatively, the Trustee requests costs 26 pursuant to Rule 37(c)(2) for expenses incurred in proving Rio was bound by the regulation.

1 Rio responds the Court should deny the Motion as procedurally defective because 2 the Trustee did not meet and confer prior to filing the Motion, the Trustee did not move to 3 compel during discovery, a Rule 37(c)(2) motion should be brought only after trial, and 4 Rule 37(c)(2) allows only for costs, not striking of a defense. On the merits, Rio argues it 5 has not taken any inconsistent positions, as it always has asserted Rio met all standards and 6 practices of Las Vegas casinos at the time. Rio contends that although it initially contested 7 the application of the federal anti-money laundering statute, it made the decision to narrow 8 the issues for trial by no longer contesting the regulation's application. Finally, Rio notes 9 that the Trustee previously moved to strike Linn's report before the Magistrate Judge, and, 10 rather than strike Linn's report, the Magistrate Judge allowed the Trustee to submit a 11 rebuttal expert report. Rio argues the Trustee improperly is seeking reconsideration of the 12 Magistrate Judge's decision.

13 Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37(c)(2), where a party fails to admit 14 something in response to a request for admission and the requesting party later proves the 15 matter to be true, the requesting party may move for sanctions in the amount of "the 16 reasonable expenses, including attorneys fees, incurred in making that proof." The Court 17 must award costs unless the Court finds the request objectionable, the request for admission 18 was immaterial, "the party failing to admit had a reasonable ground to believe that it might 19 prevail on the matter," or the party failing to admit had "other good reason for the failure to 20 admit." Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(2)(A)-(D).

21 Because a Rule 37 motion is not a discovery-related motion, the Trustee did not 22 need to meet and confer prior to filing it, nor did he have to move for relief during the 23 discovery period. Hoffman v. Constr. Protective Servs., Inc., 541 F.3d 1175, 1179 (9th Cir.
24 2008). The Court concludes that Rio's refusal to admit during discovery that it was subject 25 to the federal anti-money laundering regulation was relatively harmless. The Trustee would 26 have conducted extensive discovery on Rio's compliance with the federal anti-money

1 laundering regulation regardless of whether Rio admitted the regulation applied because a 2 substantial portion of the Trustee's good faith argument is centered on Rio's purported 3 failure to comply with the regulation. Additionally, the Magistrate Judge lessened any 4 prejudice by allowing the Trustee to file a rebuttal expert report from a new expert in 5 response to Linn's report. At the hearing before the Magistrate Judge, the Trustee indicated 6 that he did not prefer the remedy of striking the Linn report, but rather preferred getting to 7 the merits of the case and offering his own expert in response. (Tr. (Doc. #154) at 39-40.)
8 Finally, the Trustee may explore in front of the jury any inconsistencies in Rio's positions.
9 To the extent the Trustee seeks, either directly or effectively, to preclude Rio's good faith
10 defense, the availability of monetary sanctions combined with the Trustee's ability to reveal 11 to the jury Rio's positions taken throughout this case are appropriate lesser sanctions.

12 The Court therefore will deny the Trustee's Motion for Sanctions to the extent it 13 seeks to preclude the Rio from arguing or presenting evidence on the issue of whether it 14 complied with the federal anti-money laundering regulations. The Court will deny the 15 Trustee's request for monetary sanctions under Rule 37(c)(2), without prejudice to renew 16 after the parties' settlement conference if no settlement is reached.

17 2. CUFTA

18 Twenty-three of the challenged transfers totaling $2,022,008.21 occurred more 19 than one year prior to the bankruptcy petition date. (Second Am. Compl., Ex. A.) These 20 transfers therefore are voidable only under section 544 and the applicable state law, CUFTA
21 as set forth in California Civil Code § 3439.04. See Pub. L. 109-8 §§ 1402(1), 1406(b)(2) 22 (Apr. 20, 2005) (changing one year clawback period in section 548 to two years for any 23 petition commenced more than one year after April 20, 2005). The parties disagree about 24 the good faith standard under CUFTA. Rio argues that under CUFTA, a transferee acts in 25 good faith unless it colludes with or actively participates in the fraudulent scheme. The 26 Trustee contends CUFTA's standard is the same as the bankruptcy code, and CUFTA thus

1 denies a good faith defense where the transferee is on inquiry notice that the transfer is 2 actually or constructively fraudulent.

3 The California Supreme Court has not addressed whether CUFTA's good faith 4 defense applies to any transferee except one who colludes with the transferor or otherwise 5 participates in the debtor's fraudulent scheme. "Where the state's highest court has not 6 decided an issue, the task of the federal courts is to predict how the state high court would 7 resolve it." Giles v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 494 F.3d 865, 872 (9th Cir. 2007) 8 (quotation omitted). "In answering that question, this court looks for 'guidance' to 9 decisions by intermediate appellate courts of the state and by courts in other jurisdictions."
10 Id. (quotation omitted).

11 CUFTA's good faith defense is set forth in section 3439.08(a). Legislative 12 comments to the section state that good faith "means that the transferee acted without actual 13 fraudulent intent and that he or she did not collude with the debtor or otherwise actively 14 participate in the fraudulent scheme of the debtor. The transferee's knowledge of the 15 transferor's fraudulent intent may, in combination with other facts, be relevant on the issue 16 of the transferee's good faith of the transferor or of the transferor's insolvency." Cal. Civ.
17 Code § 3439.08 Leg. Comm. cmt. 1 (1986). The same comment also states that 18 "[k]nowledge of the facts rendering the transfer voidable would be inconsistent with the 19 good faith that is required of a protected transferee." Id.

20 Relying on the first part of the legislative comment, two California intermediate 21 appellate decisions have held that a transferee acts in good faith unless the transferee 22 colluded with the debtor or otherwise participated in the debtor's fraudulent scheme. See 23 Annod Corp. v. Hamilton & Samuels, 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1299-1300 (Cal. Ct. App.
24 2002); Lewis v. Superior Ct., 30 Cal. App. 4th 1850, 1858-59 (Cal. Ct. App. 1994).
25 However, the United States Court of Appeals Bankruptcy Appellate Panel for the Ninth 26 Circuit ("Ninth Circuit BAP") and the United States District Court for the Northern District

1 of California looked to the entire legislative comment and determined that a transferee does 2 not act in good faith under CUFTA if the transferee “(1) colludes with the debtor or 3 otherwise actively participates in the debtor’s fraudulent scheme, or (2) has actual 4 knowledge of facts which would suggest to a reasonable person that the transfer was 5 fraudulent.” CyberMedia, Inc. v. Symantec Corp., 19 F. Supp. 2d 1070, 1075 (N.D. Cal.
 6 1998) (emphasis omitted); see also In re Cohen, 199 B.R. 709, 719 (9th Cir. BAP 1996).

7 The Court concludes that if the California Supreme Court addressed the issue, it 8 would adopt the position of the Ninth Circuit BAP and the Northern District of California.
 9 Viewing the legislative comment in its entirety, a transferee is not entitled to the good faith
 10 defense if it colludes with the debtor or participates in the fraudulent scheme. A 11 transferee’s good faith defense also may fail if the transferee had actual knowledge of facts 12 which would suggest to a reasonable person the transfer was fraudulent.

13 3. Bankruptcy Code

14 The Bankruptcy Code does not define what constitutes good faith. The United 15 States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has declined to set forth a comprehensive test
 16 for good faith, concluding that “good faith is not susceptible of precise definition.” In re
 17 Agric. Research & Tech. Grp., Inc. (“In re Agritech”), 916 F.2d 528, 536 (9th Cir. 1990)
 18 (quotation omitted); see also Donell, 533 F.3d at 771 n.3. Courts are reluctant to establish a 19 singular test for good faith given the “unpredictable circumstances in which the courts may 20 find its presence or absence.” In re M & L Bus. Mach. Co., Inc., 84 F.3d 1330, 1335 (10th 21 Cir. 1996) (quotation omitted). Consequently, good faith is a factual question, “determined 22 on a case-by-case basis.” In re Sherman, 67 F.3d 1348, 1355 (8th Cir. 1995); In re 23 Armstrong, 285 F.3d 1092, 1096 (8th Cir. 2002).

24 The good faith inquiry is determined by asking “what the transferee objectively 25 ‘knew or should have known’ . . . , rather than examining what the transferee actually knew 26 from a subjective standpoint.” In re Agritech, 916 F.2d at 535-36. A transferee does not

1 act in good faith if it is on inquiry notice as to either the debtor's fraudulent intent or the 2 debtor's possible insolvency. See In re Nieves, 648 F.3d 232, 238-39 (4th Cir. 2011) 3 (stating that "a transferee does not act in good faith when he has sufficient [actual] 4 knowledge to place him on inquiry notice of the debtor's possible insolvency" (quotation
 5 omitted)); In re Agritech, 916 F.2d at 539-40 (holding no good faith as a matter of law 6 where evidence showed transferee knew or should have known the debtor was operating a 7 Ponzi scheme). A transferee thus does not act in good faith if the facts actually known by 8 the transferee, and all reasonable inferences drawn therefrom, would suggest to a 9 reasonable person in the transferee's position that it was receiving a voidable transfer. In re 10 Bressman, 327 F.3d 229, 236-37 (3d Cir. 2003); In re Agritech, 916 F.2d at 535 (stating "a 11 transferee's knowledge or actual notice of circumstances sufficient to put him, as a prudent 12 man, upon inquiry as to whether [the transferor] intended to delay or defraud his creditors 13 . . . should be deemed to have notice . . . as would invalidate the sale as to him" (quotation 14 omitted)). Whether a transferee acted in good faith is evaluated in the context of the 15 industry in which the transferee operates. In re Nieves, 648 F.3d at 239. The party 16 asserting the good faith defense bears the burden of proving it received the transfer in good 17 faith. In re Agritech, 916 F.2d at 535 (applying the bankruptcy code); In re Cohen, 199
 18 B.R. at 718-19 (applying CUFTA).

19 The Trustee presents no evidence and does not argue that Rio actually knew of or 20 participated in Favata's fraudulent scheme.⁶ Consequently, under CUFTA and the 21 bankruptcy code, the only question is whether Rio actually knew of facts which would 22 suggest to a reasonable casino in Rio's position that the transfers were voidable.

23 Viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the Trustee on Rio's Motion for 24 Summary Judgment, a reasonable jury could find Rio has not established its good faith

25
 26 ⁶ Nor does the Trustee argue that Rio did not provide reasonably equivalent value.

1 defense. The Trustee has presented evidence that Rio failed to comply with applicable
2 federal regulations, and had Rio done so, it would have discovered that Favata gambled 66 3 high dollar cashier's checks in two and a half years out of his front money account at the 4 Rio, and wagered over $48 million during this time frame. Some of those checks identified 5 NCM as the purchaser of the cashier's checks. Favata gave false information on his 6 application for a front money account at the Rio regarding Favata's relationship to NCM.
7 Favata gambled so extensively at Rio that Rio monitored him because his wagering alone
8 could affect the Rio Sports Book's take. During the time Favata's gambling dramatically 9 spiked and he gambled millions of dollars at the Rio, Rio knew Favata had a low limit 10 credit card that could not even cover his room and incidentals during his trips to the Rio on 11 more than one occasion. Rio already suspected Favata of structuring once, and some of his 12 transactions arguably appear to be structuring activity. Rio also knew the Nevada Gaming 13 Control Board was investigating Favata. Viewing these facts and others identified in the 14 Trustee's briefs, expert reports, and testimony in the light most favorable to the Trustee in 15 this highly fact-driven, case-by-case inquiry, a reasonable jury could find Rio has not 16 established its good faith defense. The Court therefore will deny Rio's Motion for 17 Summary Judgment based on the good faith defense.

18 Viewing the facts in the light most favorable to Rio on the Trustee's
19 Countermotion, a reasonable jury could find Rio acted in good faith. Rio presented 20 evidence that it verified the cashier's checks with Favata's banks, and no check ever was 21 dishonored or the subject of a stop payment order. A reasonable jury could conclude that a 22 casino such as Rio reasonably could rely on the nationally recognized banks, who also are 23 subject to the federal anti-money laundering regulations, to vet the source of the funds used 24 to purchase cashier's checks. Additionally, Rio presents evidence that it did not extend 25 Favata credit, and thus the fact that it did not conduct further investigation of Favata was 26 consistent with how a reasonable casino would behave under the circumstances. Rio also

1 presents evidence that even if Rio should have conducted further inquiry, it would not have 2 uncovered that NCM was a Ponzi scheme or that the source of Favata's funds was illegal 3 where several different governmental agencies were investigating Favata, and none had 4 filed charges at any time while Rio was engaging in transactions with Favata. None of 5 those governmental agencies advised Rio not to engage in transactions with Favata.
6 Viewing these facts and others identified in Rio's briefs, expert reports, and testimony in 7 the light most favorable to Rio in this highly fact-driven, case-by-case inquiry, a reasonable 8 jury could find Rio has established its good faith defense. The Court therefore will deny the 9 Trustee's Countermotion for Summary Judgment based on the good faith defense.

10 IV. CONCLUSION

11 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that Defendant Rio Properties, Inc.'s Motion for 12 Summary Judgment on the Actual and Constructive Intent Fraudulent Transfer Claims 13 (Doc. ##183-187) is hereby DENIED.

14 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Rio's Motion for Summary Judgment on the 15 Good Faith Defense (Doc. ##189-193) is hereby DENIED.

16 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiff John P. Brincko's Countermotion for 17 Summary Judgment on the Fraudulent Transfer Claims and Rio's Good Faith Defense (Doc.
18 ##217-224) is hereby GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. The Motion is granted to 19 the extent that the Trustee has established no issue of fact remains that the debtor was 20 insolvent at all relevant times for the purpose of the Trustee's constructive fraudulent 21 transfer claims. The Motion is denied in all other respects.

22 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Trustee's Motion for Sanctions (Doc.
23 ##217-224) is hereby DENIED without prejudice to move for costs following the settlement 24 conference, if no settlement is reached.

25 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant Rio Properties, Inc.'s Motion in 26 Limine to Exclude the Expert Testimony of Robert Leahy (Doc. #204) is hereby

1 GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. The Motion is granted in that the Court will allow 2 Defendant Rio Properties, Inc. to recover the reasonable costs and attorney's fees associated 3 with the first deposition of Robert Leahy. The Motion is denied in all other respects.

4 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant Rio Properties, Inc. shall serve and 5 file a memorandum, supported by the affidavit of counsel, establishing the amount of 6 attorney's fees and costs incurred in the first deposition of Robert Leahy within fourteen 7 (14) days following the settlement conference, if no settlement is reached.

8 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant Rio Properties, Inc.'s Motion in 9 Limine to Exclude the Expert Testimony of Alex Seddio (Doc. #205) is hereby GRANTED
10 in part and DENIED in part. The Motion is granted to the extent that Alex Seddio's 11 testimony regarding the relationship between the federal anti-money laundering regulations 12 and the September 11 attacks is excluded. The Motion is denied in all other respects.

13 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant Rio Properties, Inc.'s Motion to 14 Exclude the Expert Testimony of Peter Djinis (Doc. #206) is hereby DENIED as moot, 15 without prejudice to renew at trial.

16 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this matter is referred to United States 17 Magistrate Judge Peggy A. Leen for a settlement conference.

18 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the parties shall file a proposed joint pretrial 19 order on or before February 18, 2013.
